His Squad.

GOOD TEAM SHOULD DEVELOP
FROM LOCAL FOOTBALL SQUAD

Coach Delaney of St. Louis University Has Players From Which He May Select a Fast Eleven—C. B. C. Has Good Prospects, but Lacks Strength—Missouri Tigers Are Working Hard.

Coach Delaney of St. Louis University has a squad of players on the field from which he ought to be able to select a team that should outplay any eleven of that caliber in years. Many have served on the team for a season or more, while others have seen service on some of the best teams in the West.

Nine of last year's players have again donned the padded uniforms. They are good players, while they are waiting for the positions with new men that have come to the university this season.

The coach has high hopes of developing the team into championship form and has announced to the boys that he hoped that they would win their first games, but it was his ambition to annex the games later on in the season.

Although he has plenty of good material from which to build up his team, he expects more new men to report when the medical school opens this week.

From present indications, St. Louis University will have one, if not the strongest team, in the city. They have several players who are heavy enough, not too "beefy," so as to make them clumsy, but just enough to stand the hard knocks that they will receive in the title.

The fact that there is more than one player trying for nearly every position makes it all the better, for there will spring up a friendly rivalry among the players themselves as to who will make the team.

With a little training as they have had, the players have taken to the game nicely and in the hot weather did not shrink at practice. Some of the boys reported as soon as school opened, while others came in later.

Practice was delayed. This delayed the practice considerably, for when a new man came it meant to go through all the preliminary work, which took up much time.

Adrian and Captain Lindsay are the center men who will work for that position, and as each has an even chance so far, they will work hard for the berth.

Coach Delaney thinks he has the find of the local season in Reber. He is trying for left guard, and, weighing 180 pounds, he is a great help. Although this is his first year at the game, he likes it and gives promise of making the team.

Dingman, formerly of St. Xavier College, of Detroit, has been with the team for a few days and works well with the players. He weighs 250 pounds and has had considerable experience with St. Xavier and as a sub on the Michigan team.

Griffin, at left end, looks good for a permanent player on the team, having held down that position in 1903. Brown, although new to the game, is being tried out at right guard, together with "Bill" Campbell. Both are good at this position, and at present each has an even chance of retaining it.

Cooper is an old student at the university and played at right tackle last year's team. He is being chased for this position by Kinney, a former member of the Marquette College team of Milwaukee. As both have had considerable experience, this position may be looked upon as being safely guarded.

Coach Delaney has hopes in Hobbs, who is playing right end. So far he is the only candidate who has a chance of holding down this position, although a new player may arrive to beat him.

Howe is a good man at quarter, although he has a hard opponent in Lucas, a St. Louis man who is a member of the Northern college team. Lucas weighs about 125 pounds, and tells of a game in the North

In which he played quarter, and being lighter than now, was thrown over the players' heads with the ball and scored. These quarters were played on an equal by the coach, and each is playing a good game.

Heckerich is an old player, and, although he played at tackle last season, he will try for full back. Pechmann and Sam Campbell are trying for right half back. Pechmann played quarter last season, but has decided to try for the other position.

Rogers and Bennett are trying for left half. Rogers is a new man and is one of the weighty men on the team, tipping the scales at 180 pounds.

C. B. C.'S TEAM.
Christian Brothers' College has the makings of a good team. There is more interest at this college now than there has been for years, and Coach Wilbur should have little trouble in selecting a team that is fast from his squad of thirty candidates.

Captain Oscar Brockmeyer has been helping Coach Wilbur in the selection of players for the team, and each afternoon they go through the preliminary practice. Last week the team was helped by the return of Wynne, who played on the 1903 team. He weighs little more than 200 pounds.

Although it may be said that the Washington University boys had to work hard to beat Shurtleff College in their game last Wednesday, the local eleven is to be credited with the game that they played on such short practice, on hard grounds and in hot weather.

Of course, the other team had the last two handicaps to play against, but although they were not as heavy as the Washington boys, they had about ten days of two weeks more practice than Coach Brockmeyer's men.

In case alone they should have won, but by backing and pushing, the local eleven managed to score twice, and held the visitors down to nothing.

Walter Krause, Captain Cassell and Seth Smith showed their old-time form, while the new men played well together, considering the fact that they only worked with each other for about five days under the direction of a coach.

Despite the warm weather, the Missouri Tigers at Columbia, Mo., have been going through a stiff course of training during the week. The contest for many of the positions is keen, and the contestants are so evenly matched that the prediction as to the final make-up of the team would be out of order.

Currie and Moorehouse are fighting hard for center, and either may well be selected for the regular team. Currie will probably play in the first game on account of his inexperience in the game. Miller and Maxwell are the most promising candidates for the right guard.

Another local fight which should be of interest is the Brooklyn Tommy Sullivan-Abe Attell affair. There was a good deal of wrangling about the weight at latest reports, but there was a fair prospect that the bout would be put off.

This bout ought to prove about as interesting as any witnessed locally. Both men are quick on their feet, are clever boxers and are fast enough to make the contest exciting from start to finish.

Sullivan is a man who seems perfectly capable of giving all kinds of trouble to Attell. His backers in the coming fight will not lack money to back their judgment that Tommy will win the go.

Jack O'Keefe and Dick Green are carded to mix again at the West End Club this week. The two put up as strong a

At present Miller has a slight advantage, due to his previous experience. The weight of each is 125 pounds. Foster and Anderson appear best at left guard. The latter appears to have a little the best of the argument at present. He is swifter and harder and gets into the interference better than his opponent. Foster's weight, however, will count strongly in his favor as the season progresses.

Two St. Louis men who have just arrived will probably be added in a few days. These are Robinson, elected captain of the St. Louis High School team for this season, and Southberry, formerly quarter back on the same team.

This week Ben Holmeke, the team two years ago, under Pat O'Dea, came out unexpectedly for practice and is giving to Gentry a close race for right tackle. Captain Haggard, the hardest and most consistent worker in the squad, is certain of his place at left tackle. The find of the week has been Carthage. His position will probably be right end, and with his speed, weight and tackling ability, he ought to be a strong candidate for the all-Western eleven. Other promising men are Bigger, Helms and Hayes.

Behind the line Akerson is sure of his place at full back. He is fully sustaining the reputation he has at Knox College two years ago, as the line plunger, and place kicker. Green and Tillman have apparently been doing the best work at the halves, which are the most sought-after places on the team. Babbitt, Nichols and Hall are other likely candidates for back-field positions.

SOCKER GAME

Association Players
Getting Ready for 1904 Season.

SOCKER GAMES
WILL SOON BEGIN

TOMMY RYAN AND SPARRING PARTNER.
Ryan will meet Bob Douglas at the Jai-Alai Auditorium October 10.

Association football is again to be played in St. Louis, in spite of the sad ending of last year's league. Arrangements have been practically completed for a four-team league and the schedule committee is now at work arranging the dates.

The St. Louis Association Football League started out last season at a rapid gait and everything worked fine and prosperous until the players began quarreling among themselves, and with the referees over the decisions. Finally the park at which they played was refused to them, and without grounds, operations ceased.

The 1903 season, however, with its fatal ending, was more prosperous than the year previous, and the promoters who now have charge of the league intend to make this the record year.

They have started out with good intentions, and one of the most important steps taken is to give supreme power to the referee. Paul McSweeney, the soccer and baseball player, as well as referee, has been appointed referee, and will have full control of all the games.

His decisions in all cases will be final and protests at the hands of the captains of the teams will be useless in exceptional cases.

Robert Moselle has been elected president of the league, while Tommy Cahill will serve as secretary.

"There will be four teams in the league, one referee, whose decision will be final, and with this rule, I think that all arguments will be settled on the field, and we will have no more striking, shoving and bad playing when the men think they are getting the worst of a decision," said Secretary Cahill.

TO PLAY DOUBLE-HEADERS.
The teams will play double-headers each Sunday afternoon at Kullage Park, Penrose street and Newstead avenue.

Many of the old players, who have figured prominently in the soccer game for years, will again don the white guards and the sweaters, but several have seen their best days, and will retire in favor of the many young stars, who have been developed on the corner.

Last season, many of the older players were in the game, but they did not play as well as in the previous year. The good performance, only, and that the pennant race will be a close one.

The teams that will play this season are the Shamrock, Womans, Haganas, St. Anne and the Thistles. One or two of the teams will be changed in name only, as the majority of the young players who served last year have expressed their intentions of again playing.

Other players who will have new faces in the line-up, The Thistles will be aided by Scotch and Englishmen, who are here in the city, and who are committed, and at the end of the baseball season it is expected that the soccer artists will be ready to begin the battle.

by simply going in and smashing with the forearms on his opponent's guard, the antagonist in nearly every case, after a few rounds of this, Walcott is heavily built in the arms and legs, but his own arm was injured.

"Fitzsimmons developed a forearm blow that was regarded as extremely dangerous for a time. It failed of its purpose because Fitz tried to develop it as a knock-out punch. No blow can be dangerous as a knock-out punch when delivered in the position it was necessary to send this punch in from.

"Tommy Ryan tried the forearm blow in his swings for a time. He aimed at his man's neck for the most part, hoping to deaden him by landing on the jugular vein. Walcott was the only man who seemed to give him any trouble. When he fought Tommy Ryan, he simply hammered him with his hard forearms until Walcott had practically thrown up the sponge.

"Joe said his own arm was injured and stopped fighting.

"So long as the fists are heavily padded, the forearms are bound to be used. I think that a lessening in the weight of the gloves would be better for the game in all respects.

Walcott has beaten many a man down

Man Who Fights at West End Club Claims That Constant Slamming of Unprotected Members Causes Trouble to Weaker Opponent—Quotes the Cases of Ryan, Walcott and Fitzsimmons.

According to Jack O'Keefe, who fights Dick Green again at the West End Club next Friday evening, the forearms play a more important part in the modern fight than is generally supposed.

O'Keefe believes that the modern system of having heavily padded gloves on the fists enables a man with weak sinews in his hands and wrists to make a better showing than he is entitled to, and that, on this account, the fighter of ability is apt to develop his forearm where muscularly counts more than in the past.

While on his recent visit here, O'Keefe talked concerning the matter, and stated that the forearm was destined to play an important part in the battles of the ring.

"There is a lot of talk about hitting ability and about stamina in the ring," said Jack, "but we don't hear much about the way some fighters use their forearms to help them along in a hard battle.

"Look at Joe Walcott's record, for instance. He has won many a fight simply by being able to wear his opponent down. Joe hangs his man with his heavy forearms until the other man actually pinches from every lead. Then he goes in and wins.

Few fighters who haven't boxed can understand what the constant slamming of another man's gloves or forearms means. I have boxed men who have been able to escape without a punch on the face or body, have put my men out in handy fashion, and yet have been sore for a week following the fight on account of the fearful bruising I received on the wrist and on the arm nearly to the elbows.

"To be hit for round after round on the forearm is the limit of what it can hardly be used. Some fighters like Fitzsimmons, Ryan and Walcott have appreciated this fact. Fitzsimmons has been credited with using a wrist blow. Ryan used to use a forearm swing, and Walcott has used the strength in his forearms to beat many a man against whom he lined up.

Jack McKenna is pretty well known here. He is a good judge of fighters. He once said that he thought Walcott could trouble Jeffries a lot by simply following his usual plan of slamming his forearms against Jeff's until the champion got sore then sending wallops over.
